Management Commentary

The trust underperformed a falling benchmark in November. Detractors included German industrial automation specialist Aumann, as the company released third-quarter results that were below expectations due to phasing of orders and constrained production capacity; Norwegian fish farmer Bakkafrøst, due to the uncertain outlook for salmon prices and the company's lower-than-expected 2018 harvest volume guidance; and Italian domestic appliances manufacturer De'Longhi, as investors took profits after the majority shareholder sold a portion of its holding. Top performers in the month included Swiss semiconductor developer AMS, due to the company's strong growth outlook, driven by its leadership position in 3D sensing technology; Swedish cosmetics retailer Oriflame, as the company published third-quarter results showing continued strong organic growth and margin expansion; and Swedish supplier of products for recreational vehicles Dometic, as the company announced a large acquisition that will help to diversify its end markets. The earnings growth outlook for European smaller companies remains appealing, supported by the positive global economic environment.
